The attacks of September 11 On the morning of the second Tuesday in September, two airliners crashed into the World Trade Center towers in New York, causing the collapse of three skyscrapers and thousands of deaths. Thick clouds of smoke filled the air and debris showered the streets as the world watched it all on live television. Before the morning was over, two more passenger jets crashed -- one into the Pentagon in Washington, another into a field near Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Everyone on board the two planes was killed, along with 100 people on the ground. All air travel in the United States was halted as authorities scrambled for answers.

Failing economy -The economic slowdown that hit the U.S. manufacturing sector and ended the dot-com boom in 2000 spread throughout the economy in 2001. Even before September 11, soft markets and rising unemployment had led the Federal Reserve to lower interest rates in hopes of reviving consumer spending. The attacks shut down major financial markets. When trading resumed it was chilled by the climate of uncertainty. October saw the largest job losses in 21 years, with 415,000 positions cut. In December, the Fed cut interest rates for a record 11th time within the year.
